Course programme

The aim of the course is to introduce students to the history of the theories and practices on the idea of 'democratic world society' as a possible answer to war. The course concentrates on the history of the theory and practice of the construction of Europe as part of the world community. The theory and practice of international relations and of globalisation from the 14th century to today is analysed within this framework. The course is based on the analysis of the most important theoretical and legal documents of the European anti-war political thinking, of democratic international relations, and of the construction of Europe. On the basis of these documents, and the corresponding special literature students can study, research, and rethink the historical background of the idea of 'democratic world society', which is one of the most important contemporary ideas used as a possible answer of civilised societies against wars.

With the aim to understand better the European state organization principles and values the course uses the method of comparison. It compares the state and international organization ideas and practices of the Western/European civilization to the Asian - first of all the Chinese - civilization.

Organization of the course: students are required to prepare presentations on the most important theoretical or legal documents in the area. Each participant should choose one document and present it in 15-20 minutes. The documents themselves can be either borrowed from the teacher or found on the Internet (see websites below). The mark at the end of the semester is given on the basis of the presentation and of the activity during the course.

List of topics

The following themes will be studied and discussed:

Introduction:

How do people approach issues on social organization, with false and right images; imaginary communities
World civilizations

The main characteristics, principles and values of the European civilization in comparison to the Chinese

1-5. The early-modern and modern ideas and practices of peaceful association policy in opposition to war

Europe and the world system in a historical perspective

Imperialism and colonialism and its critic in the Western society

Expansion and reaction (the answers to the Western expansion in China and in Japan)

European thinkers in search of harmony and peace among European people and among civilizations:

The classical idea of world federation and the emergence of the idea of personalist federalism in opposition to war (Aristotle, Plato, Erasmus versus Machiavelli, Althusius versus Bodin, Locke, Montesquieu, Saint-Pierre – Rousseau – Kant, Ferguson, Tocqueville, Proudhon, Mill, Eötvös)

The classical idea of world federation in the Chinese thinking (Confucius, K'ang You-wei, Sun Yat-sen)

Japanese thinkers on the modernization of Japan: Fukuzawa Yukichi, Nobushige Hozumi

The influence of the Western ideas in China and Japan

2. Ideas on peaceful associations in practice:

The main types of unions of states: classical constitutional federalism (the Treaty of the Union of Utrecht, 1579; the American constitution of 1787; the Swiss constitution of 1848)

The Western phenomenon of nation state and of nationalism

The idea of personalist federalism as a means against nationalism in the Habsburg Empire (Eötvös, Renner, Naumann)

3-4. The development of the ideas on democratic international and European association policy: the constitutional federalist, unionist and functionalist bases of the European integration policy (1919-1949);

Unionism:

New international organization principles of civil society in classical confederalist form: Wilson and the League of Nations

Unionism (Churchill)

Federalism:

Constitutional federalism: the Pan-European Movement (Richard Coudenhove-Kalergi)

Personalism; unanimous organic democracy; the division of the economic and political state (Salvador de Madariaga)

Against the totalitarian states (fascist, national socialist, and Stalinist) in the name of the democratic European federation (Coudenhove-Kalergi, Ortega y Gasset, Thomas Mann, and Salvador de Madariaga)

The European Federalist Movement (Altiero Spinelli)

New European incremental personalist federalism (Denis de Rougemont, Hendrik Brugmans)

Functionalism (David Mitrany)

Functionalist-federalism (Jean Monnet)

Realism (Hans J. Morgenthau)

5. Democratization of the international organization and the international law:

Functionalist-federalism and confederalism: the United Nations Organization; the Charter of the United Nations

Universalism: the Universal Declaration of Human Rights

Classical confederalism in Europe: The Council of Europe and the Statute of the Council of Europe

6-9. Theories on the renewal of the principles of the European association policy after the Second World War

6. "The golden age" of the construction of the European Community, 1950-1953; the principles of the new federalist supranational association policy

The "Monnet-method"

Europe's first constitution: the Draft Treaty Embodying the Statute of the European Political Community, 1953.

7. The emergence of a new type association policy: the supranational European Economic Community; Federalists versus intergovernmentalists; the federalist-intergovernmentalist compromise

Integration theories emerging from practice (The influence of the supranational European institutions of the European Community on the theories and practices of the association policy in Europe):

Functionalism (Mitrany)

Federalist-functionalism (Jean Monnet)

Constitutional supranational federalism (Altiero Spinelli, Walter Hallstein)

Neo-functionalism (Ernst Haas, Leon N. Lindberg)

Classical European confederalism (De Gaulle, Thatcher)

Intergovernmentalism (Andrew Moravcsik)

Neo-federalism (John Pinder)

Personalist federalism (federation of persons and states) (Jacques Delors)

Interdependency (Robert O. Keohane)

8. The EU as a new type civil society: intergovernmental - supranational union of states based on multilevel governance (Draft Treaty Establishing a Constitution for Europe, 2003; Treaty establishing a Constitution for Europe, 2004)

The role of the federalist principles - the personal principle, and the principle of subsidiarity - in the European law

9. Enlargement: "The Europeanization of Europe"

EU enlargement and the unification of Europe

The European Communities and Central and East European countries

The enlargement-debate

Rethinking the democratic association policy in Europe

10. In search of European identity

The test of the results of the new type European association policy

How the citizens of the EU identify (European; European and national; national and European; national)?

EU citizens and the "democratic deficit"

The emergence of a European civic identity

11-14. Europe and globalization

11. A new Europe in the changing global system

Globalization: the challenge of global capitalism and the EU

The EU as a "global player": the EU's role in the process of globalization (the dilemma of open versus closed regional union)

What is global in the principles of the EU and European law?

The EU and China; the EU and ASEAN

Towards a new world system of regional unions?

12. Western and Asian Values – an international debate

Eurocentrism and its critic

European values and human rights

The Asian values debate (Singapore)

The interaction of the European and Asiatic cultures

The questions of modernization and Europeanization/Westernization of the world

The question of the universal validity of the principles of the European civil society

The clash of civilizations or harmony of civilizations (comparison of the European, Japanese, and Chinese civilization)

13. Contemporary ideas on 'global civil society'

(Havel, Kaldor, Keane, Held, Gilpin)

14. Ideas on the reform of the United Nations Organization

How to create democracy among the states?

- Classical confederation of confederalist regional unions

- Unionist-functional regionalism of sovereign states based on subsidiarity

- Supranational-functional union of autonomous states based on multilevel governance and subsidiarity
